

This is America.
SUBSCRIBE
We don't share land here.
SUBSCRIBE

it has no plot really you know don't take my land I want your land

BROKEN
11510
BROKEN ROCK
CONFEDERATED TRIBES
DATE September 17 20 19
160.000.000

YELLOWSTONE
DUTTON RANCH
PRIVATE PROPERTY
NO TRESPASSING

Strategic parenting
Police badges
Conservation orders

Cosying up to politicians
Blackmail
Sabotage

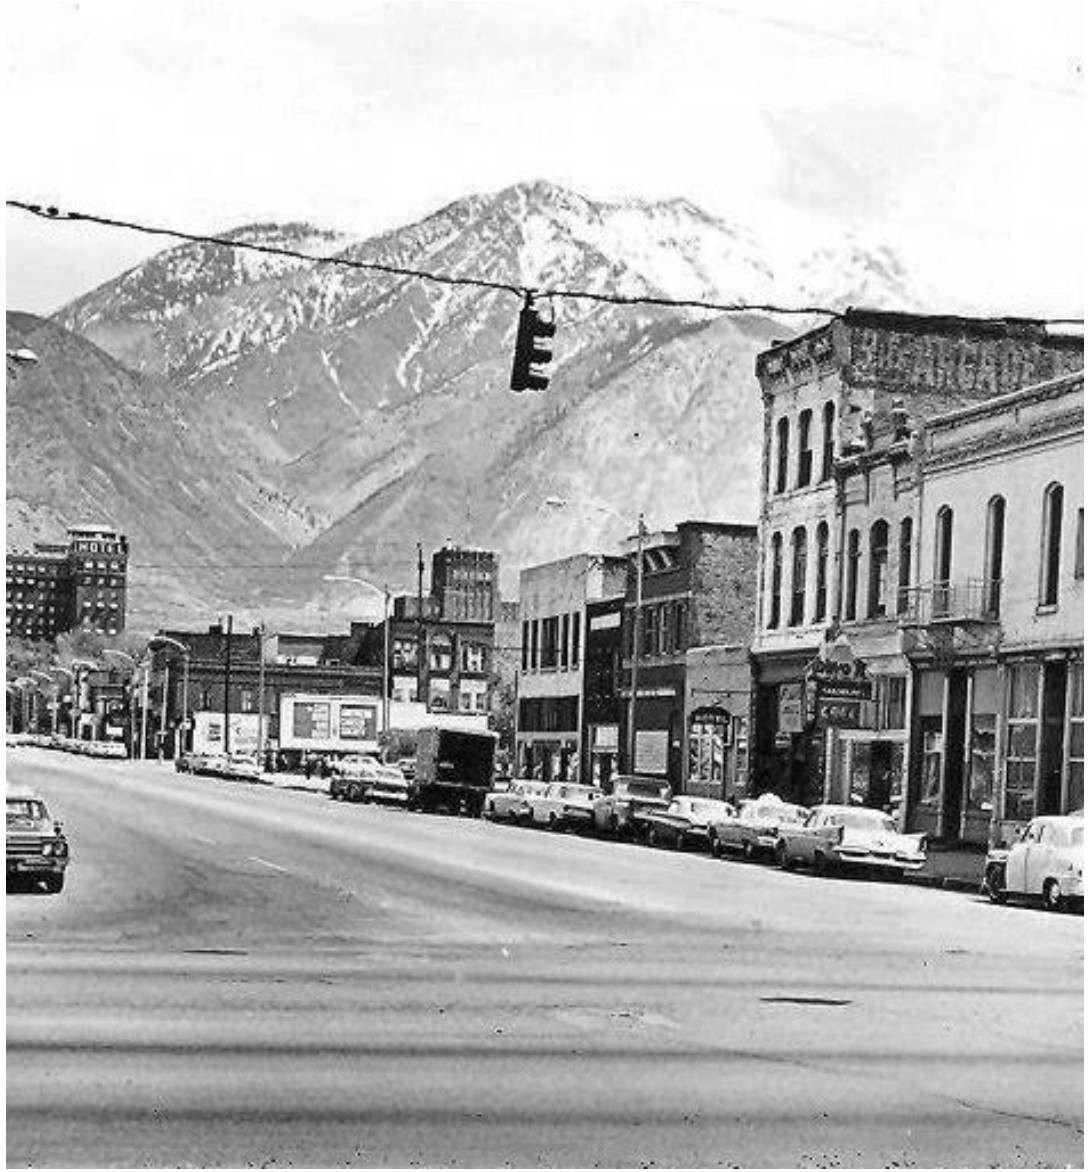

Deaths

- Total - 59 (So Far)
  - 54 Humans
    - 43 Men
    - 7 Women
    - 4 Victims of Unknown Gender
  - 5 Animals
    - 1 Bear
    - 1 Dinosaur
    - 1 Horse
    - 1 Rattlesnake
    - 1 Wolf

If the progress crowd — the boosters, techno-optimists, e/acc, uk/acc, anglofuturist and progress studies types — genuinely care about widening our coalition, then not only do the downstream benefits need to be widely tangible, but the spirit and aesthetics of these movements also need to inspire broader, durable support.

So far, despite rallying a solid base, I think these projects are either failing spiritually or aesthetically. Too often they reduce what matters to pure materialism, offering little higher purpose, while the metallic textures of these futures are often coarse and soulless. Run your finger over the contours and you get brushed steel, dimpled concrete and muted glass, not squishy moss or brittle bark. There is little enchantment, minimal poetry.

– Andrew Bennett, Sovereign Albion

CityLab
Housing

How YIMBYs Won Montana

A wave of legislation designed to reform local zoning rules and boost housing is sweeping this GOP-led state, thanks to an unusual left-right coalition of supporters.

Future home sites outside of Culbertsomn, Montana. Rising home prices and fears of sprawl are fueling a flurry of pro-housing legislation. Photo by Ken Cedeno/Corbis via Getty Images

– Kriston Capps, Bloomberg

